AWC Purpose Statement

The AWC of The Hague is an association formed to provide social and educational activities for American women living in the Netherlands and to promote amicable relations among people of all nations as well as acquiring funds for general public interest. The association does not endeavor to make a profit.
Volunteer and Honorary Luncheon
Message from the President

by Becky Failor

here are no strangers here; Only friends we haven’t yet met” This W. B. Yeats quote was the greeting at a hotel my husband and I stayed at in Ireland this summer. I thought it was such a warm sentiment. My hope is that is how our American Women’s Club treats those who come to us for the first time, or who come to the Clubhouse infrequently. I hope everyone is greeted warmly and feels that our Club is really their “home away from home.” Unfortunately, not everyone gets that warm feeling from our Club. We have been told “everyone seems so busy with their friends” and from some of our Associate Members “some of the Americans just pass me by without a greeting.” I am certain that is not the reputation you want for our Club.

Will you join me and the Board members and make a special effort to greet everyone at the Club with a smile and a warm greeting and to talk to someone at the Club do you not yet know? Try saying “Hello, I do not think we have met ….” If you find the person is new to our Club, may I suggest that you tell them something about the AWC that you like, ask about their interests, introduce them to other Members, and help them sign up for an activity. You may just make a new friend.

I so enjoyed Kick Off. I hope I followed my own recommendation and greeted each of you warmly! I am excited about some of the activities that were unveiled at Kick Off, such as Cranium Game Night on the second Friday of each month (see page 15) and the return of the love-ly candlelight tour of Kasteel Duinvoorde in Voorschoten (see page 21). A big thanks to Vice-President Sue Merrick and her team for offering such a wide array of fun things to do.

As our vote on the revision to the Constitution and By-Laws was delayed until October 8, we will combine our regular monthly meeting with time for discussion of the revisions and the vote (see following page). We will have both a daytime and evening session. I encourage you to submit a proxy if you cannot attend.

I want to end by recognizing the hours of “behind the scenes” work done by our Treasurers and Financial Team. Money comes in, bills must be paid, a budget and financial reports must be created, money must be invested, and data must be posted on the website. Each one of these transactions takes time and careful consideration. Each action must be done promptly and accurately, and then be properly recorded. These are not glamorous or exciting jobs, but they are some of the most important jobs of the AWC. My deepest appreciation goes to the women who handle this for the AWC: last year, Teresa Insalaco and Rebecca Wood, and this year, Jan de Vries, Rebecca Wood and Kathy deBest. I cannot say enough about how diligently Jan de Vries has taken on her role as Treasurer. She has worked tirelessly this summer, putting in hundreds of hours to properly close out last year’s books and establish the budget for this year. When you next see Jan, please say “Thank you.”

With deep appreciation,

Becky

October Monthly Meeting and Special General Meeting

his month we will combine our regular monthly meeting with a Special General Meeting. The purpose of the Special General Meeting is to discuss and vote on the proposed revisions of the AWC Constitution and By-Laws. This meeting was postponed from the earlier scheduled date of September 3. These revisions are primarily to implement changes in the rights of Associate Members that were approved at the November 2014 General Meeting. If you did not receive a copy of the revisions through email, please contact the Front Office at info@awcthethehague.org.

So that the majority of our Members can attend this important meeting and vote, there will be two sessions, one during the daytime and another in the evening. At each session, we will present the summary of the changes with a motion to accept these changes. We will open the floor for discussion, and then conduct a paper ballot vote. While this meeting is open to all Members, it will be restricted to Regular Members. If you are unable to attend this important meeting, please submit a proxy ballot; if you are in need of a proxy ballot, please request one from the Front Office.

We will begin each session with our October guest speaker, AWC Member Suzanne Dundas, who has participated in international Scrabble competitions for 31 years and understands both the game and the culture.

Cwm. Za. Retains. These words, each for a different reason, hold a special place in the heart of tournament Scrabble players all over the world. Join us as Suzanne enlightens us to the world of Scrabble with her talk entitled Scrabble’s Secret Subculture: Word Freaks in Love and at War. You don’t need to be a Scrabble enthusiast to enjoy this topic. Suzanne will touch only briefly upon strategy. She will delve into the history of the game, the “great dictionary schism” which is tearing the international Scrabble community apart, and some of the more colorful characters who play the game.

The Scrabble world is its own distinct subculture and it is currently embroiled in a civil war. It’s a story of depression-era innovation, corporate greed, Texas-sized egos, sex, and a remarkable bearded New Zealander. And some words.

We will be hosting a luncheon following the daytime session. Details, including cost, can be found in eNews and at www.groupspaces.com/AWCTheHague/item/1000775.

Free babysitting will be available for children between six months and five years of age. In order to have the correct ratio of babysitters to children, you must book in advance. Call the Front Office at 070 350 6007 or write to info@awcthethehague.org before October 6 to reserve your place.

I spent much of my summer lost. Rather than picturing me throwing tantrums or crying because I couldn’t find my way, realize that much of the time I was actually happy to be lost. For me, being lost is part of the adventure of travel.

Getting lost is not a waste of time. To travel is to evolve.
~ Pierre Bernard

This summer was definitely full of adventure as I traveled to Venice, Paris, Krakow and Tokyo; it was my craziest summer ever! I was only in Venice with an ex-AWC Member for just under 24 hours, but we spent much of that time lost within the maze of alleyways. While we usually didn’t have a clue exactly where we were, somehow we always managed to find our way back to the hotel and enjoyed the sights along our convoluted route. I had an easier time navigating the streets of Paris while taking a long walk with my parents, who were there because my father was touring as a trombonist with the Stanford Jazz Band (although he’s a bit old to be a student and never actually attended Stanford). Strangely enough, the neighborhood where I stayed for six weeks in Tokyo was actually even easier to navigate (see page 46 for some of my favorite sites in Tokyo). Strangely enough, much of the time I was lost in Tokyo was spent underground; the subway stations are enormous and despite ample signs in English, I was embarrassed to find myself at the wrong subway line more times than I’d like to confess. I was also lost in translation a lot as English really is a rarity in Tokyo; thank goodness for Google Translate which frequently helped me find my way. Luckily, I’m able to laugh at myself and find being lost is part of the fun.

Of course, there’s another kind of lost that’s not much fun. If you’ve just moved to Holland, I hope you’re not feeling emotionally lost. In a recent survey of 14,400 expats living in 64 countries covering 170 nationalities, the expat social group InterNations posed a question about the biggest problems facing expats. The survey found that the top issue is that expats “miss their personal support network, family and friends.” In today’s connected world, it is easier than ever to keep in touch with family and friends from afar, but having a local support network is still important for emotional well-being. This is a major benefit of joining the AWC: a chance to meet other women and help keep each other from feeling lost.

In addition to being used for reminders about upcoming activities and to share photos, the AWC Facebook Group is an excellent platform for sharing ideas and asking for advice. Recent conversations have ranged from passport procedures for dual nationals to where to find a notary, from which are the best car rental agencies in The Hague to a suggestion to grab a piece of home at the Big Texas BBQ Festival. If you haven’t already joined this group, click on the FB logo on at the bottom of our homepage at www.awcthehague.org to request to join.

If you are at a loss on how to fill your days, the AWC can definitely help. From our large variety of activities (see page 21 for a silk scarf workshop and page 24 for a day trip to Antwerp) to opportunities to volunteer (see page 22 to help with the Holiday Bazaar), we have plenty of choice to offer. If you need some additional ideas on where to take your next set of visitors, check out some ideas written by my 18-year-old daughter on page 40.

When traveling, don’t forget to stray off the beaten path. Take a chance and get lost. However, if you’re in Holland and feeling lost, remember that the AWC is there for you.

Getting lost is not a waste of time. To travel is to evolve.
~ Pierre Bernard
Meet & Greet for Newcomers
Are you a Newcomer or a potential AWC Member? Do you have questions or are you looking for a friendly welcome and introduction to the AWC? Join the Newcomers Team for coffee 30 minutes before every monthly meeting to share your questions, challenges and successes. Plan to stay for the General Meeting and hear presentations on interesting topics and learn all about the AWC. Do you have an urgent problem to solve? Feel free to email me at awcthehague.newcomers@gmail.com. No need to register for this activity.

Walking Tour Along “The Fred”
Come and join me, a Dutch “ex-expat,” for a walk along Frederik Hendriklaan, otherwise known as “The Fred,” in the Statenkwartier section of The Hague (just around the corner from the Clubhouse). You will be introduced to many different shops including favorite spots to purchase fish, bread, vegetables, meat or a good cup of coffee. Bring your shopping bags. After the walk, there will be an optional lunch at a local café (at own expense).

Book Club: Daytime
The AWC Book Clubs are open to all book lovers and are always open to new Members. There is no obligation to attend every meeting or lead a discussion. We take turns bringing a snack. If you’ve always wanted to try out a book club, you have two options per month. You can now register yourself for either (or both!) Book Clubs on the AWC GroupSpaces.com website. Any questions? Please email Teresa Mahoney for the daytime group or Rebecca Fry for the evening group at awcthethehague.bookclub@gmail.com. Happy reading!

The October Daytime Book Club selection is Hand to Mouth: Living in Bootstrap America by Linda Tirado. Linda Tirado, a married 32-year-old mother of two in Utah working two low-paying jobs, wrote a message in response to a question on an online forum: Why do poor people do things that seem so self-destructive? After her response went viral, she wrote this funny, sarcastic and honest book which allows you to fully visualize life as a minimum wage worker. This promises to be quite eye-opening!

Recap of the August Discussion
The Girl on the Train: This novel may be a runaway best seller, translated into 34 languages, but does it meet the exacting standards, honed through years of brilliant discussions, of our Daytime Book Club? Sorta. It’s a page turner, but a calculated one. One of our Members referred to it as an “outline book.” While author Paula Hawkins clearly knew where her train was taking her, she made all the stops along the way. Red herrings? Check. False leads? Check. Damaged heroine? Check. Duplicitous charmer? Check. Murky memories? Check. A major problem is Hawkins lacked the skill to differentiate the voices of her three female narrators. If you are looking for great literature, look elsewhere. If you are looking for an entertaining but unchallenging mystery, this is the ticket.

Book Club: Evening
The October Evening Book Club selection is The Light Between Oceans by M.L. Stedman. After fighting in the trenches during World War I, Tom and his wife Isabel move to a desolate island off of Western Australia. While waiting to adopt a baby, a baby miraculously washes up in a rowboat and they decide to raise the child as their own. Clearly there are consequences to this decision, many of which are heart-wrenching. This debut novel explores desperation, morality, love and loss, giving us plenty of topics to discuss.

Chat, Crafts & Cake
Let’s get creative! The AWC is open to all crafters. If you’ve been looking for an open space large enough to lay out that king-size quilt, or need more table space to organize your photo albums or scrapbooks, or just need an excuse to stitch, pack up your supplies and bring them to the Clubhouse so you can chat with fellow AWC Members while you work. You might even be able to pick up some suggestions from a fresh pair of eyes. Each week, a different Member will bring a cake made from a never-before-tried recipe for tasting and critiquing. We’re sorry, but babysitting is not available and thus we can’t accommodate date children. Questions? Contact: Suzanne Dundas at awcthethehague.crafts@gmail.com

Cranium Night
Everyone is good at something and Cranium is an adult team game that gives everyone a chance to be a “game hero.” Up to four teams compete using charades, puppeteering, sculpting, drawing, word play and trivia—14 skills in all. It’s fast-paced, lively and a lot of fun. And, it’s perfect for the AWC because “the more the merrier.” We’ve designated the second Friday of each month as Cranium Night. Come alone or bring a partner, but please be on time—we’ll begin promptly. Contact Suzanne Dundas if you have any questions.

Dinner Club
Sign up to share dinner at home with AWC friends and spouses/partners. Rebecca Niles-Pourier will set the dates, place couples (or individuals) randomly, and assign the hostess. Then each hostess will set a theme and guests will be asked to prepare a dish. For example, if the theme is Italian, then one person might bring antipasto, one brings bread, one brings Italian wine, etc. The hostess may choose to cook the main course or do it all, but then you might be asked to contribute some money towards the cost. It will be up to each hostress how they want to structure the meal. You may be asked to host one dinner for eight, six or four guests (depending on your space at home) and then you will be a guest at someone else’s home the next time. This is a fun way to share an evening with new AWC friends while enjoying a great dinner. No need to worry as you don’t have to be a gourmet chef! Mark your calendar for future dates: Saturdays, January 23, April 30 and July 2. Contact Rebecca at awethehague.wdp@gmail.com to join in the fun.

Heart Pillow Project
The AWC is in its 8th year of making heart-shaped pillows to support the arms of breast cancer patients in local hospitals. Each pillow is made with tender loving care, wrapped in a plastic bag tied with a beautiful bow and a message signed by a volunteer. No sewing skills are needed; just the ability to cut and stuff! What a wonderful way to meet new friends while contributing to a worthy cause. The emails we receive are so touching and show that women are linked everywhere to this terrible disease. We are proud to provide women with something not only practical, but comforting as well. If you can cut fabric, stuff fiberfill, thread a needle or tie a bow, we need you! No sign-up is necessary. Pilates
Pilates is a form of exercise developed by Joseph Pilates which emphasizes body development through core strength, flexibility and body awareness. Pilates works the deeper, more stabilizing muscles of the spine and the abdominal wall. Doing Pilates makes you stronger, longer and leaner. Ineke Latour, certified STOTT Pilates® Instructor and AWC Member, will teach Pilates classes at the AWC Clubhouse. You will be monitored and corrected to enjoy responsible, safe and effective Pilates training. Email Ineke to sign up for these classes and pay her directly. Bring your own mat and towel. All levels are welcome. Participants should arrive at the Club at 10 a.m. so class can start promptly at 10:15 a.m.

Dutch Cheese Tasting Class
The Dutch produce 1,425 million pounds (650 million kilos) of cheese every year. Two-thirds of this is exported, making Holland the largest cheese exporter in the world. On average, each Dutch citizen eats 30 pounds (14.3 kilos) of cheese per year. Holland is a real cheese country! As you may already know, the most popular cheeses from Holland are Gouda and Edam. Perhaps you aren’t familiar with many of the other types of Dutch cheese: Frisian, Limburger, Kernhem, Bluefort, Old Amsterdams, Texelaar-Kollumer, Leyden, Leerdammer, etc. Join us to taste several of these cheeses and discuss them over a glass of Dutch wine.

The Attack: Five Days of Battle for Rotterdam
This year marks the 75th anniversary of the invasion of the Netherlands by Nazi Germany. From May 10 – 14, 1940, there was an ongoing struggle for control of Rotterdam and its bridges that ultimately led to the devastating aerial bombardment of the old city center by the Luftwaffe. These momentous days are brought to life again in the former RDM Submarine Wharf. This exhibition is dominated by the large, menacing form of a Heinkel He 111, the bomber that destroyed the city. Huge projections, personal stories and original objects show the battle from three perspectives: the confusion among the citizens, the resistance of the Dutch defenders and the experience of the German soldiers. We will take the train from Den Haag Centraal Station (DHCS) to Rotterdam Centraal and then make our way to the Submarine Wharf. Along the way, we will stop for lunch at Dokkaffe. After visiting the exhibit, we can stop for an optional drink and snack before heading back to The Hague. Lunch will be prepaid through the AWC while the museum entrance will be paid at the door.

Dark The Hague Tour
English-guided Dark The Hague Tours have been created especially for expats and tourists. On this private tour for the AWC (limited to those 16 and up), see the dark side of The Hague as we go on a historical yet spine-chilling walk through the city. Follow in the blood-soaked footsteps of murderers, executioners and their victims. Hear stories that even the locals dare not talk about! Visit places with a mysterious or strange history, where you can still smell the scent of death and where ghostly apparitions loom when night falls...

Candlelight Tour of Kasteel Duivenvoorde
Back by popular demand, the candlelight tour of this beautiful castle is not to be missed! Located in Voorschoten, Duivenvoorde is one of South Holland’s oldest castles, dating from 1226. Owned by the Duivenvoorde family for five centuries, this castle has never been sold and has passed through several noble families by inheritance. Although the last private owner of the castle died in 1965 and left it to a foundation, one wing of the castle is still inhabited by a baroness. The estate has a wonderful collection of furniture, family portraits, silver, porcelain and Delftware. Our English-speaking tour guide will share the castle’s history and stories that will transport us back to the days of the 17th century when candlelight illuminated the stately rooms. The tour will be followed by a concert and refreshments. This special tour is a wonderful way to spend a fall evening while enjoying a bit of Dutch history. Children over the age of seven are more than welcome to join us.

Transportation will be on your own; however, we will be happy to assist with carpooling.

Your Color Silk Scarf Workshop
We all have a piece of clothing that just doesn’t work for us because the color isn’t right. In this workshop taught by AWC Member Gabrielle van der Winden, you will get a color assessment of your most complimentary colors. You will then be given a corresponding set of textile dyes to use to make your own 100% silk scarf at this workshop taught in Gabrielle’s home-based workspace in Wassenaar. Gabrielle will explain different kinds of painting techniques. You don’t need to be extremely creative or an expert painter to create a beautiful scarf. As silk is a natural product, the result will always be wonderful. While the scarves are steaming to set the paint, a demonstration will be given on how to tie a scarf. You will go home with a personal color-card and a beautiful silk scarf in your best colors.

SAVE THE DATES! MARK YOUR CALENDAR! IT IS TIME AGAIN FOR THE MOST FESTIVE EVENT OF THE SEASON: THE AWC HOLIDAY BAZAAR!

For those who have not been before, this holiday celebration offers unique gift-giving ideas from Holland, America, and many other international cultures. A wide variety of baked goods will be available for purchase as well as jams, oils, spices and honey. In addition to the wonderful foods, there will be: beautiful ceramics, artwork, lovely shawls, a wide range of unique hand-crafted jewelry, men’s gifts, wine, children’s gifts, English books and cards, and so much more. There will be activities planned just for the children, and even Santa Claus will make an appearance.

The American Women’s Club of The Hague invites you to come along and bring family and friends to enjoy a taste.

Visitors may pay with cash, PIN or credit card.

For anyone interested in volunteering to help on the Bazaar days or helping bake prior to the weekend, please email us at holbaz@gmail.com
Antwerp, City of Art

As a “City of Art,” Antwerp has always attracted attention. At the end of the Middle Ages, the port was expanded to become a beacon of trade. As a result, art and architecture flourished. The famous Cathedral of Our Lady took 169 years to build (between 1352 to 1521); with a height of 400 feet (123 meters), it is the highest Gothic building in the Low Countries. One of the most famous past residents, Peter Paul Rubens, died in 1640, but his spirit is more alive than ever thanks to his ubiquitous works. Nowadays, you will find a lively art, design, and gastronomic scene still very present in Antwerp. Artists like Luc Tuymans and Jan Fabre, and fashion designers such as Dries Van Noten and American-Belgian designer Diane von Furstenberg, feel at home in Antwerp.

Diamond District Tour: We will travel via train to Antwerp Central Station, considered to be the fourth most admired train station in the world. We will meet our tour guide and take a walk to the city. Prior to the recent recession, over 80% of the world’s rough diamonds passed through the district. Through the stories from our guide, we will relive the glory days, the near collapse and, finally, the resurrection of the Antwerp diamond industry. The Diamond District, known as the “Square Mile,” workers, jewelers and diamond merchants feel at home in their own world of grinding shops, showrooms and exhibitions.

Rubens House Tour: Next, we will take a guided tour through Rubens’ home, an Italian-style villa where Peter Paul Rubens resided with his family for 23 years. In 1946, the villa was converted into a museum which enables visitors to discover Rubens’ multifaceted talent: painter, architect and diplomat, collector and scientist, husband and father. This museum houses many art pieces by Rubens, his students and his contemporaries, presenting the living testimony of his importance to the city.

Lunch and Cathedral of Our Lady Visit: Our day visit to Antwerp will end with a very nice lunch in a gourmet restaurant, and a leisurely stroll through the main cathedral.

Fee Includes: Diamond District Tour, Rubens House Tour and admission to Cathedral of Our Lady. Lunch and train fare are not included. Look for further information in upcoming eNews concerning meeting time and location, transportation fees, lunch options and other relevant details.

Calling All Bakers!
The AWC Holiday Bazaar is just around the corner. This is not only a wonderful weekend of shopping until you drop for all your Christmas gifts, but also a great time to buy lots of delicious home-baked goodies. The Bake Sale has become one of the favorite spots at the Bazaar and the proceeds contribute significantly towards the general maintenance of the Club. So if you have that “to die for” recipe, your Grandmother’s favorite pie, the “Best Fudge in the World,” or you just like to bake, we need you!

The possibilities are limitless as we will gratefully accept both sweet and savory items: cakes, pies (non-perishable), brownies, cookies, cupcakes, muffins, breads, salty sweets and anything else you specialize in.

It’s easy to sign up. Just email me at bjessad@hotmail.com. I will gladly put you on the Bakers List and send you some helpful hints and instructions. You may also sign up at the Club; just look for the Holiday Bazaar Bake Sale Sign-up Sheet. Baked goods can be delivered to the Club on Thursday, November 12 and Friday, November 13. We would also love to have you help at the Bake Sale Booth during the Holiday Bazaar. To join the fun, contact Bazaar Volunteer Coordinator Laurie Martecchini at lmartecchini@gmail.com. She’ll be happy to sign you up for a shift...or two!

Thank you for all your help and HAPPY BAKING!

Dear dear AWC Members,

It was with tears in my eyes (once again) that I read the article last month by Jessie Rodell about the honor bestowed on me during the AWC Birthday Party in May. I was truly humbled by receiving this recognition for my years as an active Member of the AWC.

Rather than 85 & Counting, the theme this summer for me was 50 & Counting. On July 5, 1965, I first set foot on Dutch soil at the Holland-America Pier in Rotterdam, which is now the Hotel New York. This turned out to last a lifetime instead of the one year that I expected on that summer day. Since then, there hasn’t been a moment that I have regretted my decision to stay in this wonderful land of frogs! I know that the AWC has played an immense role in my feelings about living here. Through the Club, Peter and I were able to combine this mid-Atlantic life and give our children a true Dutch-American upbringing: the celebration of American holidays, children’s parties, the English-language library, the ABF, Boy and Girl Scouts, AATG and Model UN all contributed. Our three children went to Dutch schools, but in their forming years I enrolled them in all sorts of American activities for the social reasons, as well as educational ones.

Another reason for my love of Holland might be because my fourth grade class created a Dutch village, and thereby I was introduced at the tender age of ten to the fairy book land of windmills, wooden shoes, tulips and cheese. Later I learned that it was also the home of Shell, Philips and Unilever, to mention just a few of worldwide giants of industry. I would be remiss if I didn’t also mention Heineken, since that was Peter’s employer for many years!

Why (colored) photos were taken then – quite unusual in 1953 – in that fourth grade class, nor why Holland was picked as the country to study, I do not remember, but I guess it means I was destined to become part of this country. Since the day this photo was taken (as should I say developed and printed!), it was framed and hung, first in my bedroom and now my study. Who wouldn’t therefore become curious about Holland as an adult?

Thank you AWC for this honor and the beautiful vase which accompanied it as a daily reminder, as well as enabling my life here with my husband of almost 48 years and our three children to be such an enriching experience for all.

The Dutch Daily

by Eileen Harloff

As the Earth turns, summer has moved along and autumn is in full swing. Despite the many years that I have lived in this country, I do miss the varied colors in the foliage of a sunny fall day in my native New York State, a glorious intermingling of bright and russet reds next to yellow, and light and darker shades of green splashed across a hillside – particularly spectacular as the sun sets in a blaze of pink, blue and purple streaks. But enough of these musings, on to everyday affairs.

Dutch Boys as Typical American Lads

It seems that a Dutch youngster has become a star in a TV commercial of a well-known American detergent. Strangely enough, the film-maker said suitable children for this ad could not be found in America! “American children all look alike. I was told that the faces of European children have more character.” To emphasize this difference in the ad’s main character, a typical American neighborhood was created in the middle of a typical neighborhood in the Dutch city of Eindhoven. A casting bureau called for middle of a typical neighborhood in the Dutch city of Eindhoven. A casting bureau called for

Along Came Rick

Yet another Peanuts figure appears, as nine-year-old Rick Warmerdam from Spijkenisse was cast as Charlie Brown in the same TV ad. To play his role he had to put on a “fat man suit” because he was considered too thin. Not surprisingly, the suit was hot and uncomfortable, especially when multiple shots had to be taken. As in the classic cartoons, Charlie Brown is playing football and at the last minute the ball is grabbed away by Lucy, causing him to fall in the mud...after which, of course, his shirt is washed and also becomes white as snow. This and the previous scenario confirm that it is the makers of the commercials, not the performers, who are completely out of character. What American mother would ever send her son out to play in a white-as-snow shirt – or Dutch mother, for that matter? Rick has now decided that he would like to become an actor; he’s hedging his bets, though: if this doesn’t work out, he would choose to be an astronaut.

From Fruit to Boot and Beyond

“Don’t throw away rotting/rotten fruit, make it into usable products” is the motto of a group of students at the Willem de Kooning Academie in Rotterdam. The academy overlooks the massive Rotterdam Market, where at the end of the day approximately 7,700 pounds (3,500 kilos) of unsold fruit are thrown away. What a waste! Surely something could be done to make use of this excess produce? The design students began gathering up the unsold fruit, which they then pared, de-pitted, pureed, cooked and dried. One result was a leathery-type material they named Fruit-leather, which bears a resemblance to animal leather. To show the potential of these materials, they produced several prototypes, including a strong, flexible handbag made from 14 mangos, and a lamp shade from pear skins and several fruit combinations such as strawberries with pumpkin and/or apple skins. Already the group has been approached by manufacturers of other products, including a shoe factory and a German manufacturer of leather car seats seeking substitutes for existing materials. Clearly research will continue into other innovations, such as generating energy, minimizing noise, and generating energy, minimizing noise, and heating surfaces – particularly useful in times of winter snow and ice. Hopefully we won’t have to wait too long to see if the Netherlands will be the first country in the world to have plastic roads.

Colour Unleashed: Modern Art in the Low Countries 1885-1914

In the brief period between 1885 and the outbreak of war in 1914, painting in the Low Countries experienced a modern Renaissance. Color was liberated from the chains of visual reality. Suddenly, grass could be a cool blue, a face could be bright purple, and trees could turn red. Color had become an autonomous means of expression. This was one of the most important developments in modern art history. The inspiration came from the French Impressionists and Neo-Impressionists, but the artists of the Low Countries added their own flavor.

Gemeentemuseum Den Haag has brought Dutch and Belgian masters together to reveal the interaction between the two countries. From the French ‘godfathers of color’ (Claude Monet, Paul Signac, Henri Matisse and Paul Cézanne and the like) to the masters of the Low Countries (Leo Gestel, Jan Toorop, Piet Mondrian, James Ensor, Jan Sluijters, Henry van de Velde and Rik Wouters), they will all be brought together in a true feast for the eye. Join us for a guided tour in English of this special exhibition.

Guided Tour of Dutch Self-Portraits: Selfies of the Golden Age

Tour by Jane Choy, Docent

The self-portrait is perhaps the best expression of the phenomenal explosion of the art of painting that took place in the Dutch Golden Age. Seventeenth century Dutch painters portrayed themselves more than painters anywhere else in the world. Dutch painters developed various types of self-portraits: as gentlemen, with family members, role-playing, and with artist’s accessories. These paintings have much to tell us about the artist’s self-image and presentation. The painter often makes a statement about his (or her) profession, status or positioning in the world. The self-portrait is also much more than an image of the artist, but also an example of his style. This exhibition will offer a focused overview of the genre, with an emphasis on self-portraits that show the tools of the trade, a category that is particularly well-represented in Dutch art. Save time by buying your entrance ticket online in advance.

OCTOBER 2015 37
Size Matters

by Mary Adams

Y ears ago, the Lands End catalog increased the size of women’s clothing by a full size, but kept the order sizes the same. They were at the forefront of a trend called vanity sizing, where designers add extra inches of fabric to clothing without changing the number on the tag. This meant that women ordering a size 12 from the catalog were actually slipping into a size 13. Perhaps Lands End understood that women need a feel-good factor when making clothing purchases. It is part of our feminine nature, our vanity, to yearn for a smaller version of ourselves. We all secretly want to be a size 6. Maybe Lands End was on to something: the smaller the size, the larger the profit.

Size is an emotional social scale. Think about it:

GOOD to shed pounds and make an announcement that you have gone down a full size! We admit with delight, “I need a whole new wardrobe!”

BAD to admit that your normal size pants and skirts have become a tiresome girdle and you have been rummaging in the spare closet for your fat clothes.

Sizes, like currency, are different inside Europe and the US. So if women can handle this equation with downright glee – buy size 10 = wear size 11 to 14 (depending on the designer differences as much as 8 inches of extra fabric have been added) – then why do some of us have emotional problems adjusting to European size charts?

Let’s start with shoes and see how they play on the emotional scale. In London, my girlfriend Jane and I went shopping at Marks & Spencer. I spied a pair of chic black shoes. I nervously looked for the sizes. I wore a US size 8, but the UK size 5.5 fit perfectly. My brain reeled. Size 5.5 is for high school cheerleaders and dainty beings with tiny feet. Not usually being tagged as the dainty sort, I giggled. I bought the shoes. GOOD feeling. Vanity.

Later, when I lived in Paris, I wanted new shoes. The Pomp Shop was having a sale. I was ready to use my faltering French and step into glamour. I entered the store and began to browse. Nice shoes, groovy shoes, sexy shoes. I found a pair I wanted to try on. I reached into my purse and got out my shoe size guide. Oh dear, there must be some mistake. How can a simple size 8 be translated into the gigantic French 39? I liked the British equation 8 = 5.5 much better. My foot eased into the shoe. Good fit, but I felt like Big Foot rising. No sale. Vanitas.

But wait – now, after 15 years of living in Europe, the shoe equation 8 = 39 is a normal, comfortable fit in my brain. In fact, as far as my feet are concerned, the equation isn’t really necessary any more. Years of vanity have changed the equation with wisdom gained (from stiletto versus sensible heel) to any size shoe that doesn’t make my feet swell and give me a lower backache.

It is the rest of my body that still clings to vanity and secrets. My first shopping episodes in Paris were traumatic. I always felt like the lone American elephant in a herd of beautiful French gazelles. Trying to understand, much less fit into the French clothing scale of 0 – 5 was exasperating. It was based on a conspiracy of designers who broke the clothing scale at petite. If my broad shoulders demanded a 6, that was the equivalent of XXXL, which could be purchased outside the Paris shops in the French countryside where the farmers’ wives bred pigs. I still remember a French shopkeeper turning up her nose as she thumbed through the hangers trying to find me a size 5. Ultimately, she gave up the search, retrieved a size 0 and a size -1, looked at me, looked at the garments and sadly shook her head. What a relief to shop in America. I lovingly fondled the size 10 tag of my new dress and heaved a “size” of relief.

When I arrived in the Netherlands in 2002, I tried to squeeze myself into a pair of size 36 pants which seemed so much larger than the French size 4. Wait. They didn’t go over my knees. 38? Nope. 40??? Yikes, have I tipped the scale in the elephantine direction? My emotional size scale was playing havoc with my vanity until I noticed the size 54s on the next rack. My brain calculated that I still remained in the middle zone, the safety zone where I can hover between size 40 – 44, depending on the designer.

Vanity and I made peace until years later when I stumbled into Not Your Daughter’s Jeans (NYDJ) during a US shopping spree. I selected a size 12. The store clerk frowned, “Too big,” she commented. She brought me a size 8. I gulped as I took the pants into the dressing room. Wonder of wonders, I zipped them up and stepped outside. The store clerk frowned. I nervously tugged at my shirt. “Too big,” she commented and handed me a size 6. OMG, I felt a rush of vanity swell in my heart. Would they fit? Could I sit in them if I zipped them up? I sighed as I stepped into the pants. I exhaled and waited for the button to pop open. Wait...a perfect fit! From that second on, I became a loyal customer of NYDJ. No matter that I still wear pants from sizes 38 to 42 in Europe. At long last my secret is out and I have the jeans to prove it. I wear a SIZE 6!
Top Touristy Experiences

1. Discover the Mauritshuis Museum
Home to a small collection of paintings from the Dutch Golden Age, the Mauritshuis is one of the most visited art museums in the Netherlands. Set in a gorgeous 17th century palace, the permanent exhibit in this museum houses Vermeer’s The Girl with the Pearl Earring and Rembrandt’s The Anatomy Lesson of Dr. Nicolaes Tulp along with many other paintings by famous Dutch painters. When you visit, make sure to bring your Museumkaart to get free entrance (if you haven’t already, consider buying a Museumkaart at any of the major museums to save money at museums throughout the country). If you’re interested in the stories behind the different painters and works of art, make sure you download the free Mauritshuis app on your phone to get an audio guide and to watch videos. www.mauritshuis.nl

2. Explore Madurodam
You may have lived in the Netherlands for an extended period of time, but have you been able to see everything the country has to offer? Madurodam is an “interactive miniature park” which gives you the opportunity to see all of the main points of interest in the Netherlands in just a few hours. With highlights such as Schiphol Airport, the Dutch Delta Works and many “functional” windmills, the miniature park gives you a sense of everything that is packed into the small country of the Netherlands. Don’t be fooled into thinking this is purely an attraction for children. Even you will marvel at how detailed the models are and will enjoy the Delft Pottery Factory (spoiler alert: you can get an adorable souvenirs there). Make sure you don’t forget your camera! www.madurodam.nl

3. Visit the Escher Museum
Another famous art museum located in The Hague is the Escher Museum, filled with some of the best known pieces by Dutch graphic artist M.C. Escher. This is a museum experience like no other, as you travel into the mind of Escher and become part of his artwork. www.escherinhetpaleis.nl

4. Experience the City from Above
With just a 10-minute tram journey from Den Haag Centraal, you can find The Hague Tower. Ride the glass elevator up to the 42nd floor and enter The Penthouse Restaurant, the highest restaurant in Holland. While having a full gourmet meal at The Penthouse is an incredible experience, it is also very expensive. A cheaper alternative which still allows you to take in the view of the city is to pay €6 to have a drink at the Sky Bar and then make your way out onto the balcony where you can see a panoramic view of the top of The Hague. There isn’t a set dress code for the Penthouse and Sky Bar, but you’ll probably feel awkward if you show up in shorts and a t-shirt! Something dressier is recommended. www.thepenthouse.nl

5. Savor a stroopwafel
Stroopwafels (directly translated to syrup waffles) are a Dutch delicacy that will cure any cravings for sugar. Made from two thin waffles sandwiched together with a layer of syrup, these are best eaten hot off the waffle iron. Forget about the calories in this sugar-filled snack and just enjoy it! You can often find a stroopwafel vendor on Spuistraat, the main pedestrian shopping street.

6. Try Hollandsche Nieuwe Herring by the Binnenhof
A trip to The Hague wouldn’t be complete without trying the Dutch Nieuwe herring. The best place to get one of these slimy, but tasty typical Dutch snacks is at the small pavilion just outside the Binnenhof, where the Dutch government and parliament are situated. To eat the herring like a local, cover the fish in small pieces of raw onion then lift the whole herring by its tail, tilt your head back and eat the herring upwards. Word of caution: if you don’t normally eat fish, it’s probably best you don’t try the Dutch herring – this is about as fishy as it gets!

7. Bungee Jump from the Scheveningen Pier
If you’re anxious for a thrill, catch a 15-minute tram ride from the center of The Hague to the nearby beach and bungee jump off the end of Scheveningen Pier out over the North Sea. Even if bungee jumping isn’t for you, the beach is still worth a visit. In the spring and summer months, clubs and restaurants are set up along the sand and there is a huge range of exciting places to enjoy a drink or meal while watching the sun set over the sea. If the sun is out, you can bet the beach will be filled with locals taking advantage of the decent weather – it’s a rare occurrence, so make sure you savour every moment of it! www.bungy.nl

8. Enjoy Pannenkoeken at the Malieveld
Pannenkoeken are delicious Dutch pancakes, definitely something you have to try! At the Paviljoen Malieveld there are 20 different types of pannenkoeken, both savory and sweet from which you can choose. Unlike American pancakes, pannenkoeken are large (often the size of a pizza), thin and eaten for lunch or dinner. Another Dutch treat which you should try is poffertjes: tiny, round, fluffy pancakes eaten with powdered sugar and butter. Don’t worry, it’s perfectly acceptable to order both a pannenkoek and an order of poffertjes! www.malieveld.nl

9. Have Drinks on the Plein
After a long day at school or work, you’ll see many Dutch students and adults grabbing a drink and snacks at the Plein, a large square in the center of The Hague. With festive lights and outdoor seating with heaters in the winter, this place is perfect for a gezellig evening (there’s no English translation for this Dutch word, but in this context it roughly means the cozy, warm feeling you get from being with good friends). Relaxing at the Plein is the perfect way to end a day out in The Hague.

The Hague may not have as many of the picturesque canals that Amsterdam boasts on their postcards, but the atmosphere in The Hague is much more laid-back as a result of fewer tourists. Although you may have lived in The Hague for many years now, can you say you’ve experienced all of these suggestions? Tot ziens!

Atlantic Wall at Museon
During World War II, The Hague was particularly affected by the building of the German line of defense called the Atlantic Wall (Atlantic Wall). The construction of bunkers and tank ditches brought an enormous amount of damage to the city and 135,000 inhabitants were forced to leave their homes. Museon visitors can become acquainted with the history of the construction of the Atlantic Wall in The Hague. The

Visiting Tokyo

by Melissa White

Words that come to mind to describe Tokyo (a city of 13 million with an extended municipality that is the largest in the world with over 35 million) are modern, organized, clean, safe and fascinating. It has been just over 20 years since my last visit to the Far East. Obviously, I hadn’t done my homework well enough, because I was expecting to see a city reminiscent of my memories of Seoul or Hong Kong, but instead found a modern urban center more like Los Angeles or Chicago, except with signs that I couldn’t read.

Unlike our usual vacations where we spend no more than 4 or 5 days in a busy city, my 15-year-old daughter Ashlynn and I spent 6 weeks in Tokyo. As temporary residents, we had a lot of time to explore; it didn’t take us long to fall in love with this amazing city. Despite this affection, I would recommend considering a visit to Tokyo as a gateway to the land of the rising sun (and heated toilet seats!) rather than an end destination. Much like I viewed Raleigh, North Carolina when I lived there, Raleigh and Tokyo are both great places to live but not necessarily holiday destinations.

That being said, if you do find yourself in Tokyo, I’m sure you’ll have a great time. Here are some suggestions on places to visit and things to do:

Flying Sushi
While there isn’t a sushi restaurant on every street corner in Tokyo as I’d imagined, there are definitely plenty to choose from. We enjoyed trying three different delivery methods of sushi: traditional sushi bar, roto-sushi with a rotating conveyor belt, and flying sushi with a high-tech delivery system. By far, my favorite was the flying sushi served at Uobei in Shibuya. Each seat has its own tablet from which to place orders. Just a few minutes later, the sushi comes zooming down a “sushi lane” on a special platter right to your seat. It’s efficient and fun. Even better, the sushi is very fresh, the variety is incredible and the prices are the cheapest I have ever seen for sushi anywhere in the world.

Roppongi Kaguwa
While wandering around our neighborhood, we passed a theater. To be honest, I thought the description of the show sounded kind of cheesy, but we were willing to take a chance:

A spectacular combination of traditional Japanese dance and modern twists, jazz dancing, upbeat music and even flying performers. Performers are obviously professional dancers and Japanese Drag Queens (beautiful men and transsexuals dressed in women’s clothes). You can enjoy the ever-changing movable stage which incorporates an unrivaled new technology system all over Japan.

We expected the place to be full of foreigners, but instead we were the only ones. We were seated right in front; before the show, several of the performers came by and gave us their business cards. The website says the theater seats 186, but there were only 20 in the audience. That didn’t stop the ten performers on stage from putting on a fantastic 45-minute show with 12 acts, each with different costumes and incredible dancing. The stage is difficult to describe with constant moving platforms giving each song a completely different look. Like most theaters, photography wasn’t allowed during the performance, but we were invited up on stage afterwards for this photo. www.kaguwa.com

Shibuya Crossing
Apparently Japan wasn’t the first place to introduce a “scramble crossing,” which allows pedestrians to cross in all directions including diagonals, but Shibuya Crossing is one of the largest and most heavily used in the world. Frankly, this photo doesn’t do justice to the number of people that cross at the same time. After experiencing the crossing for yourself, grab a drink at... the Starbucks and head to the 2nd floor for a great view from above the crossing.

Sky Deck
There is no shortage of observation decks in Tokyo, including two towers and at least two skyscrapers. Resembling the Eiffel Tower, Tokyo Tower was built as a communications and observation tower in 1958; it stands at 1,092 feet (333 meters) tall making it the 2nd tallest structure in Japan. Dwarfing Tokyo Tower is SkyTree; this communications and observation tower completed in 2012 stands at 2,722 feet (830 meters) tall making it the tallest structure in Japan and the 3rd tallest structure in the world. While we saw both towers, we didn’t visit either. Amazingly, there is a free option, which is the observation decks on the 45th floor of the Tokyo Metropolitan Government Building; the view was great, but we made the mistake of visiting during the harsh haze of the mid-day sun. On a relatively clear evening during our last week, we splurged and went to the Sky Deck, which is the rooftop open-air deck on the 55th floor of the Mori Tower in Roppongi Hills. We were excited to catch our first glimpse of Mt. Fuji in the distance. After savoring the view from the roof, we ventured down to the 52nd floor where we visited the Mori Art Museum, the Tokyo City View Observation Deck and a café, where we enjoyed the amazing view while eating dinner. It’s best to purchase a ticket for the museum which is also good for entrance for the City View at no additional charge; there is an additional ticket required for the Sky Deck.

Takeshita Street
Despite the immense size of the city, I was surprised by the number of luxury shopping areas in Tokyo; a Google search on Louis Vuitton in Tokyo results in a dozen stores. Rather than window shopping on the upscale streets, however, I preferred checking out the latest trends for teens. Takeshita Street in Harajuku is lined with trendy shops, fashion boutiques and used clothing stores. Tutus were particularly popular in the shops, but I actually saw more teens wearing traditional kimonos than those colorful tulle skirts.

Temples and Shrines
While Ashlynn often finds any excuse to stay outside when we visit cathedrals in Europe, she was thoroughly fascinated with Tokyo’s many Buddhist temples and Shinto shrines. Most of the temples and shrines offer a quiet escape from the big city. This one pictured, however, is anything but quiet with its entrance full of small tourist shops attracting large crowds; we bought some nice personalized chopsticks and kimono robes. Senso-ji Buddhist Temple in Asakusa is Tokyo’s oldest temple, although the buildings are replacements of those destroyed during the air raids of World War II.

Tsukiji Fish Market
I didn’t have the dedication to get up early enough to make the trek to the fish market in the hopes that I could gain entry to the tuna auction; my friend arrived at 4 a.m. and was already too late to claim one of the 120 coveted spots. Instead, I waited until after 9 a.m. when visitors are allowed to walk through the Seafood Intermediate Wholesalers Area. This was not designed as a sightseeing area; be prepared to dodge forklifts in this massive wholesale market. Next to the wholesale market is the retail market for the public. I’ve been told that the sushi is the freshest in the world, but instead of waiting in line, I enjoyed a breakfast of fresh grilled scallops topped with crabmeat and a grilled squid.

GOING DUTCH

Ueno Park
Tokyo’s most popular city park is Ueno Park, which was established in 1873. It is home to many wonderful museums, including the Tokyo National Museum which appears quite large from the outside, but has managed to keep the collections to a manageable size and is therefore not overwhelming; Shitamachi Museum housing a reproduction of a tenement building from 1923 for a glimpse of Old Tokyo; and the National Museum of Western Art, which houses several Dutch Old Masters including a newly confirmed Vermeer. The Ueno Zoo dates back to 1882; although there are some modern habitats for the gorillas and big cats, there are still too many old concrete enclosures for the hippos and giraffes.

Toshogu Shrine, also known as the Shrine of Gold, was built in 1627 and then remodeled in 1651 (and again in 2014). Remarkably, it has survived several major earthquakes and fires plus the air raids of World War II. On its grounds is this eternal flame. This peace monument was established on August 6, 1990 for the 45th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima. The flame itself was from the burning embers of a man’s home in Hiroshima. Originally, his nephew saved the flame as an expression of his resentment, but eventually it became a symbol of his desire to abolish nuclear weapons and for peace. This flame was merged with a flame lit by the friction of broken roofing tiles of Nagasaki and brought to a special session of the UN in 1988 and then to this peace monument.

Of course, in a city this size, the list goes on and on. I also really enjoyed the Edo-Tokyo Museum, the National Museum of Emerging Science & Innovation, Tokyo Sea Life Park and Tokyo DisneySea. Despite spending much of the six weeks lost, I’ve never had so much fun being lost before.
